Andrew Durkin, Last of One-Time Prominent Woodhull Family, Passes At Corning Home at 76 Years

Family Well-Known in Addison for Many Years—Represented Woodhull on Board of Supervisors for Several Years—Later Served as Deputy Sheriff—T. C. Tobin of Addison One of Bearers at Funeral Tuesday.

The death of Andrew Durkin, last of a family of six sons and one daughter well known and popular years ago in the town of Woodhull, died Saturday afternoon at his home in Corning following an illness of several months. He had been confined to his bed since January.

Mr. Durkin was a brother of the late John Durkin of Addison whose death occurred about a year ago. Other brothers John, James, Edward, Thomas and William Durkin, and a sister, Mrs. William Roche, are all deceased. The family was prominent for many years in the town of Woodhull where Andrew Durkin served several terms as supervisor. They attended St. Catherine's Church in Addison and enjoyed a wide friendship in this section.

Andrew Durkin was born in Woodhull in April, 1860, a son of John and Catherine Sweeney Durkin, early settlers of the township. He attended the Woodhull school and later became one of the outstanding farmers of the locality. He represented the town on the Board of Supervisors from 1904 to 1910, being the first Democrat elected to the post in eighteen years. He served for four years as a member of the Equalization Committee and was a member of the first Good Roads Committee appointed by the board.

Although continuing to operate his farm in Woodhull, Mr. Durkin moved to Corning twenty-seven years ago. He commuted to his farm until 1913 when he was appointed deputy sheriff on the staff of Sheriff William H. Murray. He served in this capacity for three years and was at the same time constable in the city of Corning.

Upon leaving the deputy's post, Mr. Durkin entered the employ of the New York Central Railroad. He remained with the company for a year and then entered the employ of the Corning and Painted Post Street Railway Co. In 1925, he was assigned as crossing watchman for the railway company at Painted Post. He retired six years ago.

In 1909, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Gallagher of Corning. He was for many years a member of Corning Council, Knights of Columbus, and was a member of St. Patrick's Church. He was also affiliated with the League of the Sacred Heart and the Holy Name Society of the church.

Surviving are his widow; two daughters, Miss Mildred Durkin and Miss Evelyn Durkin, both of Corning; the following nephews, Attorney John Durkin of Jamestown, James and William Durkin of Olean; and one niece, Mrs. John R. Gavin of Olean.

The funeral was held at St. Patricks 'Church, Corning, Tuesday morning at nine o'clock, the Rev. Father Newcomb, assistant pastor, officiating. Bearers were John McKeown, Thomas Hanrahan, Timothy Driscoll, Thomas Kinsella, Daniel Harrington of Corning and Timothy C. Tobin of Addison. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Corning.

"Plow-Handle" is Rushed With Big Sled Order

The wheels of industry are turning with a rush at the J. S. Harrison plant these days, and will be for five months to come, according to Charles A. Brewster, president of the concern. Orders now on file for sled parts require the shipment of a carload every two weeks from now until November. There are 80,000 sled parts in each car shipped from the Addison plant, so the local woodworking industry must manufacture more than a million pieces before time for snow to fly.

The J. S. Harrison Company make parts for the nationally famous Flexible Flyer sleds and carts. A force of approximately twenty men will be busy at the plant thruout the summer and fall.

Former President Hoover was the honor speaker last night as delegates made ready to start nomination speeches Thursday.

Cornell Commencement Exercises To Be Held in Drill Hall June 15

Degrees to Be Awarded to Approximately 1600, an Increase of 200 Over Last Year — Miss Louise S. Miller, of Addison, to Receive Degree of B. S. in Home Economics.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 1936—The 68th commencement exercises at Cornell University will take place in Ithaca on June 15 when approximately 1300 degrees will be conferred. The provisional list, subject to change after the examination which are being held this week, includes 1148 baccalaureate degrees and 150 advanced degrees. The total number of degrees for the year, including those awarded in September and February, is expected to be practically 1600, which represents an increase of almost two hundred degrees over last year.

LOUISE S. MILLER ADDISON—

Dr. Livingstone Farrand, President of the University, will confer the degrees on the candidates in the ceremony to be held this year in the Drill Hall. This will be the first time that the huge building, which will provide ample room for the thousands of alumni, friends, and parents of graduates present, will be used for the exercises. Uncertain weather conditions have hitherto made it a problem whether to hold the ceremony in doors or out, but from now on the Drill Hall will be used in any case.

The groups of candidates will be presented for degrees by the deans of their respective colleges. Dr. Farrand will then award the degrees and will express the University's farewell to its youngest alumni.

Alumni reunions of twenty-four classes of Cornell graduates will bring back hundreds of visitors to the campus Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 12, 13, and 14 preceding commencement. Among events of the week-end are a baseball game with Dartmouth, the annual Senior Ball, a performance by the Cornell Dramatic Club, senior and alumni singing on the portico of Goldwin Smith Hall, and numerous class luncheons and dinners for the alumni and meetings of various class and alumni organizations.

A "rally" in Bailey Hall on Saturday night, June 13, will bring all the classes together to hear a talk from the President of the University. Sunday afternoon the graduating class will march in solemn academic procession to hear a baccalaureate sermon given by the Rev. Thomas W. Graham, D. D., Dean of the Graduate School of Theology at Oberlin College. Sunday night will be given over to the Class Day ceremonies, when the officers of the graduating class turn over their duties to the officers of the junior class.

A high point of the week-end will be the announcement of the election of two alumni trustees to serve on the University Board. Immediately following commencement, Cornell's second "Alumni Institute" will get under way with returning alumni spending three days on the campus, attending a special series of lectures and reviving their college days.

Miss Louise Sackett Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Miller of 37 Tuscarora Street, Addison, will receive degree of Bachelor of Science in Home Economics at Cornell University. Miss Miller was a member of the Debate Club for four years and also a member of the Agassiz Club, an organization interested in the natural sciences. She prepared for college at Addison High School, graduating with honors in the class of 1931. In September Miss Miller will start an internship in social work in a school at Framingham, near Boston.

Addison Included in Group of Fifty-Four Communities Selected For Special Educational Tests

Quizz, Held Locally June 1-3, Expected to Show How Well Schools Have Prepared Young People for Common-Sense Life—Both Boys and Girls Tested For Ability to Meet Problems of Home Economics and for Home Mechanical Information.

Boys and girls in the schools of fifty-four selected cities, villages and rural communities of New York State of which Addison was one were called upon Friday, June 5 to complete the preliminary evidence for or against some aspects of the public educational system as supervised by the Board of Regents. By means of tests carefully chosen and proved effective in other states, these young people were expected to reveal during this week how well the schools have prepared them for common-sense life by instilling the desire for accurate knowledge and by helping to make them socially competent. This direct contact with thousands of pupils was decided upon by the Regents when they initiated some six months ago an inquiry into the character and cost of public education, in order to value their own service to the state and the schools' service to young people.

WANTED—INITIATIVE

There has been one noticeable development during the six years of depression which is not chargeable to debit side of the ledger; that is the marked increase in the use of flowers about homes. This change is not confined to any one section of the country, but may be noted wherever one travels, east, west, north or south.

Some believe this sudden awakening of Americans to the love of flowers is the outgrowth of the depression, as people have found time hanging heavily upon their hands and turned to cultivating plants as an outlet to suppressed energies. Others attribute it to the fad of the day, like the miniature golf courses which raged for a season about 1930, and then were as quickly forgotten. This latter point of view has been pretty thoroughly abandoned, for the use of flowers has steadily increased each season since the turn of the present decade, until now it is a poor city, village or hamlet which cannot boast of its displays of blooms.

Doubtless there are many reasons contributing to the greater use of flowers about American homes, besides the compulsory leisure of people formerly busy at their jobs. Certainly the almost universal use of cars has brought far divided people to become near neighbors, and every family traveling about has been stirred with admiration of the floral displays to be found. As recently as the late twenties the writer took an auto trip through parts of Canada and was struck by the colorful beds of petunias growing along many roadsides in Ontario. He was carried in fancy back to boyhood days and the neighborly lady whose box of petunias always grew on the porch to brighten the spot and laden the air with spicy odor. This summer all who look about them can find petunia beds in greater profusion around New York state than in Canada, doubtless because many a man or woman has been stirred to thoughts of bygone years and the flowers which grew in someone's garden.

Certainly the stir of memories has been partly responsible for revival in popularity in countless old time perennials that have returned to favor after languishing almost forgotten in old fashioned gardens during a quarter or half century. How many people have returned to some old weed-choked garden to dig up roots of iris, lemon lilies, sweet William or phlox. Nor is that necessary, for today the nursery people have become wide awake to the renewed interest of perennials, so that all the old favorites and countless new ones are offered to any who will come and buy. The fine thing about these hardy perennials is the fact they nearly always spread and as the clumps increase from year to year we are glad to divide and hand out healthy roots to our friends and neighbors, so they too may enjoy the experience of coaxing beautiful flowers out of dirty roots.

While there has been a marked increase in flowers grown in this village during the last six years, it cannot be said to match many similar communities in this. Quite certainly community interest in beautifying the village home grounds with more flowers and shrubs would be vastly increased if a garden club could be formed here. Garden clubs serve many a useful purpose wherever organized. They promote fellowship among neighbors by taking members to one anothers' gardens; they make a forum for discussion of garden problems; they provide the group contact which makes it possible to secure competent speakers; they bring together members who desire to better their gardens by exchange of surplus plants, and possibly best of all garden clubs make a community civically conscious, promoting the love for all things beautiful and encouraging individuals and villages to beautify public and private sunrroundings.

It is to be hoped the lack of this useful kind of organization will be supplied in this place in the near future. Any group of persons community-minded enough to initiate formation of a garden club in this village should be given the wholehearted support of every intelligent citizen here. Of course it takes initiative, but what worthwhile enterprise does not need someone to take the lead?

A CONSTRUCTIVE FARM PLAN

During the past few years the over-production of farm products has been surpassed only by the over-production of farm programs. For every problem encountered, a dozen panaceas have been offered. This has resulted in a confusion which has beclouded every issue.

For this reason official Washington, and particularly that part of it which is seriously interested in agricultural questions, is giving considerable thought right now to some suggestions put forward by Wheeler McMillen at the recent Dearborn Conference of Agriculture, Industry and Science.

Mr. McMillen, well-known editor of The Country Home, a national farm publication, doesn't want to limit production. He wants to increase it. And that is considered sacrilege in many quarters these days. But every farmer will agree that increased production would be a great thing if a market could be found for it. And this market, a new market, is what Mr. McMillen proposes.

"Most of the output of the soil", he says, "is of goods that we eat and wear. But we have recognized the limit to human desire to consume food and apparel. Why not, therefore, learn to produce out of the soil increased quantities of materials that can be converted into commodities supplying human needs as yet unsurfeited? In cellulose and proteins, in starch and sugar, in plastics and insecticides, perhaps in other new fields yet to be opened, can be found markets for the products of American farms. And where else, if not to the soil, are we going to turn for supplies of these physical materials?

"Our trails may lead through laboratories and factories and market places today, instead of through unbroken wilderness, but like the trails of the pioneers, these new adventures lead to their objectives. Let's not forget that we have one practical destination — the establishment of actual markets that pay profits to farmers for products that go into industrial markets.

"And as we go forward with the consequent production of more goods, we shall make jobs for acres that need better employment than they have; we shall make jobs for men who have no jobs at all."

Mr. McMillen's proposal, delivered in much greater detail before the Dearborn Conference, is constructive. It offers food for thought, and for action, to every progressive element in agriculture.

UNDER PRIVATE OWNERSHIP

A short time ago a prominent editor and owner of several important newspapers, died. He was known as one of the ablest newspaper men of the country, and had built up very valuable privately-owned properties.

In his will, in which he made large bequests to members of his family, he ordered that, for all time to come, his newspapers were to battle for government ownership. During his lifetime he had favored government ownership of the power industry, and it was his considered wish that the same policy be continued after his death.

That was his right in a free country. But it is an ironical fact that such a career as his could have been enjoyed only under a government which protected the sanctity of private ownership. Government ownership, carried to the logical conclusion, means communism, which involves government ownership of all kinds of property, including newspapers.

The deceased editor was a self-made man. He was able to rise in the world under our country's philosophy of encouraging private ownership, a philosophy that has made possible the rise of all other distinguished Americans.

SCENES OF CARNAGE

A writer in a recent issue of American Mercury presented a new and interesting view of the automobile accident problem. He observed that, in the light of present-day conditions, it is not remarkable that 36,000 persons are killed in traffic accidents annually—but that it is remarkable that the number is not several times as great.

In the average state, almost anyone not completely crippled can obtain a license to drive a car, irrespective of his ability, responsibility, intelligence or judgment. If he choose, he can operate a car that belongs by right in the junk heap—a car with an inaudible horn, feeble or glaring lights, uncertain brakes and a steering gear affected with St. Vitus dance. If he drives that car in a dangerous manner, cutting curves, weaving in and out of traffic, and "giving her the gun" whenever possible, the chances are that he will escape arrest—and that if he is arrested, he will be assessed a relatively small fine and permitted to go right on driving. When the inevitable finally occurs, and someone is killed or injured because of his recklessness or incompetence, he may have a harder time getting out of the mess—but that won't bring a dead person to life.

If any progress is to be made in reducing the terrible toll of automobile deaths and injuries, stringent methods must be adopted. Traffic codes must be modernized and enforced with the utmost strictness and impartiality. Much higher qualifications for the issuance of drivers' licenses must be established. Drunken drivers must be eliminated. And the unsafe automobile, as well as the unsafe driver, must be banished from the road. Otherwise, America's streets and highways will continue to be scenes of carnage.

"The work that we do is the making of the Flag."

America, as this is written, is preparing for its annual and reverent celebration of Flag Day.

From every public building, from millions of private homes, will fly the standard which has been the symbol of American valor and of American love of freedom through a century and a half of glorious history.

What is America doing today to perpetuate those qualities — woven into the flag by the strength and the courage of our fathers?

Are our politicians preaching valor when they urge the sons of pioneers to deny their own initiative, their own self-reliance, and to turn instead to a centralized government for direction, for ideas and for support?

Are the new economic prophets preaching love of freedom when they ask our people to relinquish their constitutional right to govern themselves, so it may be delivered into the hands of temporary officeholders and bureaucrats?

The men and women who braved both danger and hardship to carry the flag across a continent wouldn't have thought so. Few Americans who love personal liberty and independence would think so today. If they did, our flag would lose its meaning.

• • •

Franklin K. Lane once personified the American flag as speaking thus to an humble worker:

"I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become . . .

"I am all that you hope to be, and have the courage to try for . . .

"I am the Constitution and the Courts, statutes and the statute-makers, soldier and dreadnaught, counselor and clerk . . .

"I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution . . .

"I am what you make me, nothing more."

We know what our fathers made the flag. Can we afford to nullify their labors?

Job-Dispensing Politicians Seen Behind Call for Perpetual Relief

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE annual meeting of an organization called "The National Coordinating Committee of Social Service Employee Groups" was held recently in Atlantic City. It is described as "representing organized 'rank and file' social workers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

This organization, in annual meeting, sent to leading contenders for the Presidential nomination, including President Roosevelt, a telegram demanding to know: "As a leading contender for the nomination for the Presidency, what is your platform on work and on relief?"

On the same day this telegram emerged in the news, there appeared a comment by Mr. Walter Lippmann about a national problem just looming into formidableness. Mr. Lippmann's article had no relation to the telegram of the organized social workers. He was discussing the broad subject of national policy about relief. But what Mr. Lippmann said had a bearing on what the organized social workers did. I quote Mr Lippmann:

"The vice of the system is that it is rapidly being converted from emergency relief into a thing as permanent as the veterans' payments. There is nothing in Mr. Roosevelt's system of administering relief which causes the system to liquidate itself. On the contrary, his method causes the system to consolidate itself. If it is not overthrown, we can easily find ourselves permanently committed, even with full recovery, to annual Federal payments of two billions or so to the needy over and above the billion for the veterans."

It is not the recipients of relief that mainly tend to perpetuate the system. They, poor devils, are not organized, their voices are not loud, they are not aggressive. They, in most cases, really want relief to come to an end. They want work at private jobs. But there are other beneficiaries of the relief system. If to the poor relief means food, there is another class to whom relief is a "meal ticket" in the slang sense.

Of those to whom the relief system means fairly well paid jobs in administration, the organized social workers are perhaps the least to be criticized or feared. Social workers as a class are unselfish by temperament, and their motive is more one of service than of the comparatively small salaries they receive. But it is entertaining to observe that even they are not immune to the motive that animates the individualist order of society. Because relief is their career, they want relief perpetuated and expanded. As steel manufacturers like to see the steel business grow, as writers are cheered to see increase of newspapers and magazines, so do social workers like to see the relief system maintained and increased. The pressure for enlarged scope and for other forms of self-interest is no less among social workers who profess collectivism than among workers in private industry who frankly practice individualism.

But the more formidable force tending to keep Federal relief in existence and growing comes from a different quarter. It consists of a type of relief worker and administrator whom the trained social workers would never admit to their fraternity. It consists of the local politicians who in some communities have the jobs that go with relief administration. In the aggregate the number of them is large. In the present set-up they are, of course, Democrats. In a Republican regime they would be Republicans. Jobs connected with Federal relief have become patronage.

There is another group, even more energetic in trying to perpetuate relief as a Federal function. They are the Mayors of cities, the state officials, the county and town officials.

There is yet another vested interest in relief. It consists of radicals, in the Administration and elsewhere, who wish Federal relief perpetuated because it helps their purpose of changing the American form of government and society. Their goal is government ownership and operation of all industry. If they, from their leverage in the Administration, are able to discourage private industry their beliefs about social organization give them a motive for doing so. It is fundamental with the radicals that the best way to promote a new social order is to make the old one unworkable.

Possibly a future historian, trying to devise a friendly epitaph about Mr. Roosevelt's administration, might say that with motives good enough, but with care-free buoyancy, with a zest for novelty for novelty's sake, he set in motion forces which he could not control; which, indeed, he had not the temperament to try seriously to control.

Pointing the Moral

By WALTER LIPPMANN

When the Herald Tribune came forward with its proposal for coalition at Cleveland, it named four Democrats who exemplified the necessary qualifications for a common front against the New Deal. Two of them, Mr. Newton D. Baker and Mr. Lewis W. Douglas, have now published a letter in the New York Times stating their views. "We believe," they say, "that the New Era," meaning the Harding, Coolidge and Hoover administrations, "and the New Deal are two strings from the same source. The one fostered private monopoly in the name of national prosperity. The other has fostered state controlled monopolies in the name of the national welfare. We believe that both are an aberration from the basic principles upon which this nation has grown great and has remained free."

They argue that the subsidies, the government regimentation, and the bureaucratic centralization of the New Deal have been the consequence of the toleration of private monopoly and its encouragement by exclusive tariff during the twelve preceding years of Republican rule. Speaking as traditional Democrats they want neither to go back to the policies of 1921-'29 nor to go on with the policies of 1933-'35. They believe that the country can take a course radically different from both, one which leads to the reduction of tariffs and other special privileges, the dissolution of private monopoly and the restoration of a competitive economy under a free, decentralized and limited government.

Though the position they take has been the historic position of American liberals and progressives from the time of Jefferson to that of Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, there can be no doubt that since the war the country has lost its grip upon these principles. Whether the revulsion now under way against the New Deal marks a revival of those principles or whether it is merely reactionary, we have yet to learn. But about one thing we cannot deceive ourselves. For the time being at least, a majority of those who wish to be progressive have forgotten how to think in the liberal tradition.

The point is clearly illustrated by the farm relief plank drafted by a group of Mid-Western Republican leaders. Undoubtedly the authors of that plank have set out sincerely to win back the farmers who left the Republican party because they were squeezed between the protected and monopolistically administered prices of industry and the unprotected competitive prices of agriculture. But in attempting to remedy this injustice, these Republicans propose to do exactly what Mr. Roosevelt has done. Instead of striking at privilege and monopoly, they wish to give complementary privileges and monopolies to certain favored, and as it happens politically important, groups of farmers.

Their plan, in essence, is to pay the farmers a subsidy equal to the extra prices the farmers pay on tariff-protected manufactures. This is indeed an engaging proposal. If it were put into effect, who would pay this subsidy? The farmers themselves would pay part of it. The protected manufacturers would pay part of it. But most of it would be paid by the men and women who make their living without benefit of tariff protection or farm subsidies.

They are a great multitude. They include, for example, every one connected with railroads and public utilities; with the automobile industry in all its branches, including the service stations; with hotels, newspapers, the amusement industries; with the building industry in all its branches; with the public service including soldiers, sailors, teachers, all officials, all pensioners, all those on relief; virtually all those connected with banking and finance; all the service industries from shopkeepers to beauty parlors to undertaking establishments; all professional men and women, clergymen, doctors, lawyers, social workers, virtually all men and women who have retired on their savings and on life insurance policies.

For all of them are "unprotected." They do not enjoy the advantages of a tariff. But like the farmers they pay in an increased cost of living for the tariff. Under the Mid-Western Republican scheme they would go on paying tariff-protected prices, and on top of that they would pay taxes to give the farmers a subsidy equal to the cost of the tariff to the farmer. They would, in short, catch it coming and going.

This proposal illustrates the common vice of the New Era and the New Deal. They have both stood for protection, privilege and monopoly. In the New Era the advantages were given principally, if not exclusively, to some industries. Under the New Deal the attempt has been made to give equivalent advantages to the more powerful farm group and to the well organized labor union. The Mid-Western Republican farm plan is simply the New Deal under another label, just as N. R. A., except for its ornamental trimmings, was the Republican toleration of monopolistic price fixing under a new label.

That is why the stand taken by Mr. Borah in the Republican party, by Messrs. Baker and Douglas in the Democratic party, is so important. These men who have raised the standard of liberalism may make little impression on either party this month. But, unless the country insists upon sacrificing its freedom and its prosperity in a scramble for privileges and monopoly, the future is theirs.

"Convention Comes To Town!" Is Slogan Around Cleveland

Cleveland—This city is throbbing with excitement and anticipation. The streets are thronged with milling crowds filled with the carnival spirit. Stores are ablaze with the colors of all the states in the Union. Gay bunting decorates hotels and public buildings and rippling flags, fanned by a warm breeze from Lake Erie, snap ever so gently, tugging lazily at the halliards which hold them aloft. Innumerable bands boom out music—music which often bangs against the eardrums. Planes roar over the city, to and from the airport, bringing new arrivals with each passing moment. Trains pull in from north, south, east and west, bringing living cargoes of enthusiastic citizens to an already crowded metropolis. Lake vessels nose into mooring places with whistle cords tied down in greeting. Impormptu parades suddenly begin in the thoroughfares, and march in, out and through heavy vehicular traffic. Motor vehicles of all makes, license plates and degrees of newness or antiquity, scurry up and down traffic arteries, some in search of hotels and garages, while others are operated and owners intent upon seeing the city. Portraits of various candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States look down from every vantage point, while the theme song of supporters of Governor "Alf" Landon of Kansas, the old time song, "Oh, Susannah", is heard on every hand. The reason for the tumult and the shouting? "Why, friends, the GOP Convention's come to town!

Inside the Hotels

Inside Cleveland's hotels, jammed to the doors, a more serious note prevails, even though restaurants and grills are filled with merry-makers, and countless groups hold open house in as many suites and rooms. Here, within the hostelries, are meeting the party leaders. Here, within the hostelries caucuses are being held. Here, within the hostelries is drama! Drama built around disappointment; drama built around thwarted ambition; drama built around impending success for two men, the successful candidates for President and Vice-President on the Republican ticket; drama built around the impending success of men and women who have fought and struggled that their candidates for President and Vice-President might be nominated by the party's convention which began Tuesday morning; drama arising from unexpected illness of those attending; drama arising from receipt of unexpected telegrams from "back home" making known that death had struck—drama coming from the whole human cycle, and ever present in greater degree when vast numbers of persons assemble in one place.

State Headquarters Busy Place

The headquarters of the New York State Republican Committee located in the Empire Room of the Hotel Cleveland, have been thronged almost every working hour since Sunday. Delegates arriving last night by special train and via other means of transportation, have been beseiging headquarters for room changes, room assignments and for additional tickets to the sessions of the convention. These tickets are at a premium, and whole families of visitors have almost come to blows in deciding who shall use the ducats for the morning, afternoon or evening sessions. Ticket speculators have moved heaven and earth in an effort to get their hands on session tickets, but thus far, reports indicate, their efforts have met with little success. All of which is a good idea.

Future Financiers

An enterprising urchin of tender years has been cleaning up in and around the Hotel Cleveland by approaching cheerful delegates and saying: "Mister, betcha quarter I kin tell yuh who'll be the next President of the United States—bet me?" The victim invariably bets, and the lad replies, "A Republican!" He always gets his quarter. Of such ingenuity financiers are made. Or perhaps politicians!

Another tad, over Hotel Carter way, extracts dimes from pedestrians by betting he can "rattle off the names of all the Republican Presidents since Lincoln." The bet being made he chants: "Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover an' the fella you guys name here this week". In any event, including Abraham Lincoln, the country has had thirteen Republicans who have served as President while four Democrats, including Mr. Roosevelt, have been elevated to that high office, that is, since 1861.

Convention to be Widely Broadcast

With both the National and Columbia Broadcasting companies officiating at all the sessions of the convention, the proceedings of the assemblage will be heard over more than 250 stations, it has been announced. All of NBC's stations will function in the broadcast as will more than 60 of Columbia's, with other broadcasting companies and allied radio organizations extending additional facilities. NBC will have more than forty of its staff in Cleveland and Columbia will have an equal number. Included in the National Broadcasting Company commentators and announcers who will describe the sessions to the radio audience are: Walter Lippmann and Dorothy Thompson, who write for the New York Herald Tribune; Graham McNamee, veteran announcer; Edward C. Hill, publicist and colorful news commentator; William Hard, Ben Hicks, Lowell Thomas, author, war correspondent, traveller and radio and picture narrator; Charles Lyon and Ben Grauer. Among others Columbia will have Paul Mallon, United Press Columnist, H. B. Kaltenborn and Bob Trout to describe what will go on inside and outside the Cleveland Convention Hall. The convention will be the most widely broadcast of any in many years, all attesting to the growing importance of radio in our scheme of things today.

Albany Slated as City for State Convention

Albany—Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton has announced that the Republican State Convention will be held in the 10th Regiment State Armory in Albany on September 28 and 29. Mr. Eaton made the announcement after the Albany Knickerbocker Press had obtained exclusive information that he had taken steps to rent the armory for the convention. Explaining the selection of Albany as the city for the state convention, Mr. Eaton said:

"Albany is favored as the convention city because of its central location and its proximity to the office of the Secretary of State. This proximity will permit of last minute filing of candidates nominated at the convention, midnight of September 29 being the deadline for such filing. In addition, the presence of the convention in Albany will unquestionably stimulate Republican sentiment in Albany County and arouse great Republican interest throughout the entire Capitol district."

Mr. Eaton added that at a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee the sentiment of the members was "virtually unanimous for Albany County as the Convention City" and that "this sentiment had been arrived at after the Executive Committeemen conferred with members of the State Committee generally."

WASHINGTON SNAP-SHOTS

Court decisions affecting Federal legislation have again brought to the fore the issues of the Supreme Court and the Constitution. The illegalizing of the Guffey Act under which a miniature NRA was fastened upon the bituminous coal industry has been a foregone conclusion in the minds of virtually all attorneys except those who pushed it through Congress under the heaviest kind of pressure. Even the House Judiciary Committee, one of the ablest committees in either branch of Congress, had refused to report the bill, because of its obvious weakness, until President Roosevelt demanded its enactment "however reasonable" doubts of its constitutionality might be.

Despite this general knowledge that the Guffey Act was another of those measures which went beyond constitutional limitations, those who had sponsored it in Washington affected surprise at the court's decision and once more sought to use it as a springboard to attack the court.

Actually the Guffey Act stood as a monument to what should not be in government—the power of a small organized minority to dictate to Congress and the highest officials of government. The legislation was desired by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers with only a few hundred thousand members. It was given more or less wholehearted support by the American Federation of Labor officials, with a membership of less than 4,000,000. It was generally admitted that it would increase the cost of coal to the consumers and that it was unconstitutional. How did it come to be enacted? On three separate occasions Lewis publicly threatened to call strikes in the basic coal industry unless Congress and the Administration jumped through the hoop for him. Twice government officials were compelled to virtually beg him not to unset the entire recovery applecart. The third time they surrendered.

Similtaneous with this decision, the Court of Appeals sitting in the District of Columbia held invalid the Professor Rexford Tugwell's construction of a new village in New Jersey under the Resettlement Administration. This decision was based upon the court's finding that once again Congress had surrendered too much of its constitutional authority to the executive departments. The interesting aftermath of this case was that it was immediately indicated that no appeal would be taken to the Supreme Court at once, and that by the time the court could act next fall, other similar villages which might be declared invalid would have been completed.

Almost lost in the mass of legislative and political news from Washington is the widening split in organized labor's ranks. On one side are President William Green and his followers in the American Federation of Labor who believe that workers should be organized according to the jobs they perform—by crafts. One other is the coterie headed by President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers who insist that all workers in any industry should belong to the same union.

In an attempt to settle the scrap, the A. F. of L. appointed a special committee to study the question of industrial vs. craft unionization. After three months, the committee failed to make a report at the recent A. F. of L. council meeting, so no action is possible before the Federation's convention next fall.

Meanwhile, the argument rages. It is rapidly becoming a personal fight between Green and Lewis over which of them shall control the destinies of the workers who have joined the A. F. of L. And, as is usually the case with labor agitators, the working man is not being consulted as to his preferences.

MEMORIAL SERVICE PARTICIPANTS VISIT HISTORIC MONUMENT AT TROUPSBURG

Here is pictured the group participating in memorial services at East Troupsburg and Woodhull when the nation's soldier dead were honored. An impressive feature of the former service was the visit to the first monument erected in Steuben County to those who met death in the Civil War and which is located in the cemetery directly across the road from the East Troupsburg Baptist Church. From left to right are Rev. George T. Jones, who offered the memorial prayer at both services; Attorney George A. King, Corning, who delivered both memorial addresses; Carl B. Carpenter, who presided at the East Troupsburg service. In front of Attorney King is little Miss Ellen Johanson who recited Lincoln's immortal address at Gettysburg.

George Widger spent Sunday with relatives in Elmira.

Mrs. B. F. Short and daughter Madeline spent Saturday in Elmira.

Foster Weinand was in Corning on business Saturday.

Addison and Woodhull Cows Are High

There were 720 cows on test of which 43 were dry during the month of May according to the report of Robert Drake, tester for the Southern Steuben Dairy Herd Improvement Association. Ray Jordan of Woodhull has high cow for butterfat. This Holstein cow produced 75.9 pounds of butterfat from 2052 pounds of milk. Leon Andrews of Addison has high cow for milk by producing 2195 pounds of milk from 61.5 pounds of fat.

In the following herds there are cows that have produced over 60 pounds of butterfat: C. A. Stewart & Son, 2; Ray Jordan, 3; E. H. Ackerman, 2; J. E. Wagner, 1; A. E. Scudder, 4; C. A. Drake & Sons, 1; R. F. Ingersoll, 1; Robert Dann, 5; Wilson Bennett, 3; Leon Andrews, 2.

The following members of the association have honor roll cows: C. A. Stewart & Son, 18; Jack Kamenuk, 9; Ames Button, 3; Ray Jordan, 5; A. H. Olmsted, 7; R. R. Decker, 3; Casson & Kennedy, 1; G. M. Stewart, 3; R. P. Burr, 3; E. H. Ackerman, 7; Earl Wilson, 1; Gus Neilitz, 3; J. E. Wagner, 7; A. E. Scudder, 26; L. H. Brotzman, 8; C. A. Drake & Son, 4; R. F. Ingersoll, 5; Burt F. Smith, 3; Robert Dann, 47; Wilson Bennett, 18; Leon Andrews, 13; Mrs. Helen Wixson, 1; B. Vastbinder, 6; Frank Young, 7; Leon Johnson, 6.

The tester gives the five high herds based on butterfat as follows:

Owner	Cows	Fat	Milk
L. H. Brotzman	12	44.3	1149.3
Leon Johnson	10	40.9	1040.3

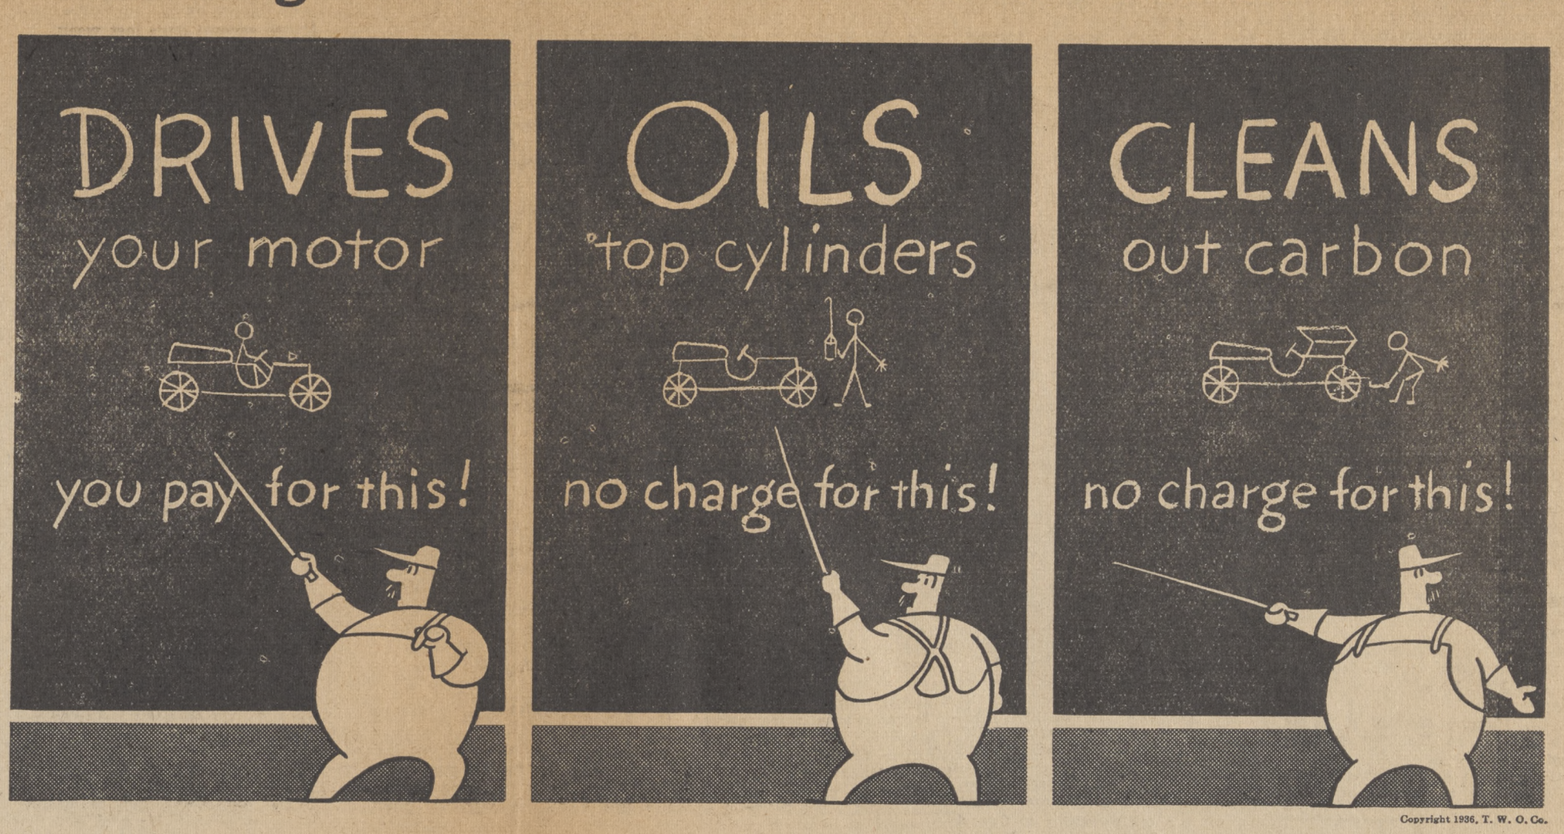
Amazing New Gasoline Does 3 Jobs at 1 Price



Copyright 1936, T. W. O. Co.

THERE'S a big difference between getting something you don't pay for and paying for something you don't get. That's why there's a big difference between Triple-Action Tydol and ordinary gasoline.

Tydol Gasoline actually brings to your motor new vital services ordinary gasoline cannot deliver. First, Tydol drives your motor (at the same price as regular gasoline). Second, Tydol oils your motor...for every gallon contains a patented top-cylinder oil that prevents sticky valves and smooths the action of all upper motor parts (and there's no charge for this extra lubrication service). Third, Tydol cleans your motor. Its exclusive carbon-solvent cuts down hard carbon deposits and wards off new carbon formations. (And there's no charge for this extra service.)

So, any way you figure it, every time you fill up with ordinary gasoline you pay for Tydol's extras...Why not get them by buying this "3 job" gasoline at its "1 job" price?

Five-Run Rally in Last Inning Gives Knights Victory Over Woodhull In Practice Tilt

Johnny Smith Falters in First But Settles Down to Steady Boxwork — Thompson, Perkins, Lyons, Wheeler, Croft, Break Into Addison Line-up— Gotham's Charges Play Splendid Game Afield.

With a number of aspiring freshmen filling important places in their ranks, the Addison High School Knights got off to a bad start in a practice game against the Woodhull High School nine on the Addison diamond Tuesday, but came to life with a vim in the final inning and sent the visitors home on the short end of a 7-6 score.

Roy Gotham's combine came down the valley keyed to a victory pitch and came near attaining their objective of victory over the Knights. The Woodhull boys played a splendid game afield and had the advantage of some excellent mound work on the part of Wheatcraft. Among the newcomers in the Addison line-up, Walter Perkins handled himself with credit around the initial sack, Tommy Lyons fielded his position capably and wielded a potent stick at the plate. Paul Thompson took over the pitching chores late in the fray and protected the sacks from all enemy runners. Croft and Wheeler broke in at the right field position, but neither received any fielding opportunities.

Woodhull scored in the first inning when Johnny Gunboat Smith, Addison boxman, got off to a faltering start by allowing three base on balls to the first three batters to face him. Recovering his customary poise, Johnny struck out the two following, Walter Perkins then muffed Kilmer's grounder and Smith failed to cover first, precluding all chance of a throwout at the bag. Mason hit safely and the fourth Woodhull run was over. Olin fanned to retire the side.

In the sixth, the first two men flew out to Lyons, an error by Johnny Orr put a man on the pathways and the following two batters found vacant spots in the Addison line of defense, a pair of runs going over. Sahrle struck out to end the session.

The Knights scored first in the second. Root tripled and scored on a grounder by Orr. In the fifth, Lyons smacked a safety and came over the plate on the second hit of the day by Billy Root. In the seventh and final inning, trailing by four runs, Hewson's men showed a decisive punch by pushing over the markers which copped the decision. Wheeler walked, Gillespie was safe on an error, Lyons was hit by a pitched ball, Paul Kane delivered a three base hit, Root flew out to left field, Orr hit, Perkins walked and Alio Triches rapped the apple for a two base ride.

The score.

Skies Look Bright For '37 Knights With Experienced Men and Promising New Talent

Thompson, a Freshman Next Year, Has Shown to Advantage in Practice Tilts and Will Augment Pitching Strength of Hewson's Box Staff — Perkins Rated a Sinecure at First—Tommy Lyons, Said to Be Most Promising of All, Threatens Tenure of Dave Little at Second.

Despite the disappointing season which Coach Wendell Hewson and his inexperienced squad of Addison High School Knights are leaving behind as the current baseball schedule draws to a close, brighter days are unquestionably in the offing. Practically all of this year's team were undergoing the strain of competition for the first time and when 1937 rolls around this season's experience will prove invaluable in stacking up against such traditional strong rivals as CFA, Corning Northside and others of the Steuben County Class A loop.

The practice game Friday between the High School and the Non-Residents afforded the coach to test out some of his new timber. Paul Thompson, who will be a freshman next year, was given a turn on the mound and turned in a sweet exhibition, holding his opponents to three hits during the period he worked. This promising youngster will undoubtedly be able to give Johnny Smith plenty of assistance in the box next year and will probably be found in the outfield on all other occasions because of his hitting ability.

Walter Perkins was another newcomer whose performance brought joy to the mentor of the Knights. Walter's fielding, hitting and throwing rates as outstanding for a freshman and he seems destined for a sure berth at the initial sack in forthcoming campaigns. Tommy Lyons at second is ranked as the best looking prospect of the lot, not flashy but dependable and a natural at the plate. The midway assignment for next season will presumably resolve into a dogfight between Tommy and the present encumbent, Dave Little. Dave is expected to show a big improvement in both defense and offense with the passing of another year, but in the event that Tommy gets the call, Little will undoubtedly receive an outfield assignment or be held for general utility.

Wheeler at short unquestionably has the making of an excellent infielder, but Johnny Orr seems to hold the edge. Kane at third will be understudied by Johnson. Kane seems to be a hitter and has plenty of hustle. Croft has been showing plenty of promise and may gain an outfield berth.

Next year's line-up, at this distance, with the number of years each man has to play, looks something like this:

Pitchers — Smith (2), Thompson (4).
Catchers—Billy Root (3).
First—Perkins (4)
Second—Lyons (4). Little (1).
Short—Orr (3), Wheeler (4).
Third—Kane (3). Johnson (3).

Outfield talent includes: Croft, with 3 years, Shelanskey 3, Triches 2, Crawford 4, Reynolds 4. Joe Domenick, a returning veteran with two years service yet to play, should be the outstanding gardener for next season, but he slumped badly this year, the dash and enthusiasm which marked his play as a freshman on last year's county champions being absent, much to the chagrin of his coach. Joe was withdrawn from his regular berth on this year's nine and his future is uncertain. Larry Gardner, another veteran of the '35 championship combine, also lost his place with this season's aggregation. He has, however, another year to play and if he returns in his old form for the '37 campaign, will add greatly to the outfield strength of next year's Knights.

Game Postponed Due To Rain

The Austinburg-Addison game of the Little Six League scheduled for last Sunday was postponed due to wet grounds. The game will be played the latter part of August.

Lefty Flynn Off To Auspicious Start

Lefty Flynn, who pitched Coach Wendell Hewson's Addison High School team to the Class A. championship of the county in the 1935 campaign, donned the colors of the Painted Post Indians for the first time Sunday, May 31. Johnny was sent in to relieve BeGell in the fourth inning after four runs had been scored by the opposing Mansfield nine. The Addison Southpaw pitched shutout ball until the twelfth, when Mansfield edged a run over the plate to win by 5-4. Twelve men went back to the bench by the strikeout route, an average of nearly two an inning during the time that Lefty occupied the slab.

Mohawks To Play At Woodhull Sunday

Woodhull will be host to Manager Hibbard's Little Sixers Sunday. Manager Hibbard anticipates a good ball game and expects to take all of his eligible players with him.

Woodhull has had a good ball team in past years and should play a fast game of ball. "Bob" Drake, formerly a player of Woodhull and now a Tri-County player, states that Woodhull is still in the running and will up-set many apple-carts before the season is over.

Pep-Os Crash Over Six Runs In Third Inning To Sew Up Victory Over Wellsboro

Spear Has Excellent Control, Giving Bakers Big Advantage — Beers Poles a Three-bagger — Hewson, Kelly, Hadlock and Meadows Account for Doubles —Hewson Snares High Throw From Plate in Startling Play at Second.

The Pep-O Bakers swung back into the win column last Sunday afternoon on the local diamond by taking the measure of the visiting Wellsboro nine, 7 to 4. Rain threatened to halt the game on numerous occasions but the contenders stuck gamely to the battle in the face of drizzling showers which accounted for many errors as the balls were wet and slippery.

Spear was in the box for the Bakers and his wonderful control gave the local team a distinct advantage. Addison tall six runs over the plate in the third inning to gain a commanding lead and were never headed. Spear was hit by a pitched ball, Hewson smacked a two-bagger, Heidrick flew out, Kelly hit safely, Riker received a free ticket, Robbins was safe on a fielder's choice, Hadlock cracked a double, Grange was safe on an error, Beers socked a three-sacker and Spear flew out to short. The Pep-Os added another in the fourth when Hewson hit safely, Heidrick was hit by a pitched ball and Hewson scored on two infield outs.

Wellsboro drew first blood of the game in the first inning when two runs were chalked up to their credit. Bastian was safe on an error. Osgood and Martin were easy outs, Bartoo hit a lazy roller in front of the plate and runners were safe at first and third. On Bartoo's theft of second, Bastian scored as Hewson threw bad to Beers, the latter loafing after the ball to allow Bartoo to sneak over on a protected play.

In the second inning, Meadows hit a double and scored as successive batters were thrown out at first to give the visitors another tally. Wellsboro threatened in the sixth when three hits were made and one run scored, leaving men on second and third and no one out. Grange took a long fly in center and held his man at third on the throw-in. Heidrick next faked a runner back to third and confused the opposition by nailing a man at first. Hewson gathered in an infield ball to register the third out at first.

The best play of the game was made in the fifth inning, when the first man up singled. On the first pitch the ball got away a short distance from Robbins and the runner started for second. Robbie's throw was high, but Hewson leaped in the air for the ball and came down with the sphere in his mit on top of the sliding runner.

Special Tests At Addison High School

The tests have been state-wide. Every type of school has been sampled and every sort of community in the state has been included. Fifty-four places where the tests would first be given were chosen only after months of analysis and statistical work proved the communities to be representative, according to a statement from inquiry headquarters in New York.

When the inquiry staff has drawn from the preliminary tests of last week, an outline of the educational issues they reveal, further intensive study of the schools will be made, Dr. Francis T. Spaulding of Harvard who heads the division of secondary education for the inquiry, said.

"Of special interest to inquiry researches", Dr. Spaulding said, "is the boy or girl who leaves high school before graduation. Among the many things to be made clearer by our fact-finding program is this one of why young people leave school. I cannot predict what the boys and girls of the state have revealed this past week about the schools and therefore I do not know many of the questions we shall study intensively later, but I do know that the pupil who decides not to complete high school is of special interest."

Dr. Luther Gulick, general director of the inquiry, said that no conclusions would be drawn until all the evidence was in, which would be, he said, approximately two years from the beginning of the study.

The localities where the tests are given by the inquiry staff were selected as representative after extensive factual study of all types of communities in the state.

In the elementary schools sixth grade pupils were examined, for this grade is typical of the elementary section and is more or less uniform throughout the state. The researchers for the inquiry sought to discover how much specific information in reading, writing and arithmetic, not to mention spelling, has been imparted by the time the boy or girl is advanced from elementary school. These sixth grade tests were given under the direction of Dr. Leo J. Brueckner, from the University of Minnesota, who heads the elementary school section of the inquiry.

In the high school measure was sought not only of scholastic ability but especially of the pupils' equipment for common-sense life. Formerly many young people left school at the end of the eighth grade. Now, inquiry researchers have discovered, the average future citizen of this state attends high school from two to four years. Accordingly it is important to find out how much the student soon to have the privilege of citizenship knows of American history and government, and how alert he is to present-day history being made all around him. In ascertaining how good a citizen he will be, the inquiry will seek answers to such questions as: What do these young people know of local politics and international affairs, of the significance of current events? Are they open-minded and intelligently critical? Are they self-dependent so that they are in the process of becoming real adults standing on their own feet? Are they inelastic, set, with habits of mental dependency? Are they susceptible to propaganda or critical of it?

Boys and girls were tested for their ability to meet home economic problems and for mechanical information of especial use at home. Responsibility for one's own health is considered by the inquiry researchers as one of the indices of development, and will accordingly be included.

These various analyses are expected to reveal in what measure the young people of this state have got the things they should have when they leave school either before or after graduation, and especially whether the schools have awakened the desire for knowledge so that the student will continue his education himself.
